

Barrack blocks on either side of a street in the stone fort around AD 200.

Discovering the phallus carved onto a stone set into the corner of the HQ building of the stone fort.

The stone at the top of this wall from the HQ building of the stone fort has LEG VI inscribed on it. Archaeologists realised that it was like a signature for the builders of the fort men from the 6th Legion of the Roman army, brought to Britain in AD122.
