

This waterpipe was made out of fired clay and probably supplied water to an important building somewhere in the second timber fort.

Two wooden junction boxes connected by a wooden water pipe. The box at the front also has a hole at the top this may have been for a pipe coming down from a gutter on the roof of the HQ building of the second timber fort.

Archaeologists drawing the plank floor in what was probably a soldier's barrack room in the 1st timber fort.

Carlisle ROMAN DIG