

Cleaning up the rampart of the 1st timber fort. The linear marks are the remains of logs that were laid beneath the rampart as a foundation.

Below the earliest Roman fort are scratches in the natural clay surface made by a plough. These were probably made in the early Bronze Age about 2000 years before the Romans built the 1st fort on the site.

Carlisle ROMAN DIG